Ok. I'll propose adjusted language in the document and let Jeff know.

I think I'm happy with the legwork you did with Jeff.

Want to just bait till the same list window for the house? We can decide then if we like?

Thoughts on this. It will need to be incorporated into doc your lawyer sent to us by beginning of this week.

Subject: Condo Sale

Questions:

Is Jan 15th listing a hard list date or open to list Spring (Feb/March/April) based on Jeff recommendation.

Home/Condo Sale agreement - Suggest add language "List by Jan 15th, or based on list date recommended by agent"

Jeff Conversation Summary

Has not seen big change or reduction in rates post election.
Current listings in Kirkland after election, has not seen much activity.
Does not anticipate much movement in activity or rates between now and end of year.
But could move if priced right.
List by date Jan 15 - could sit for a few months if beginning of year.
Activity picks up mid Feb/March - there is stigma if sits too long.
Recommend wait to list Feb/March/April

Tenant - What options do we want to give him?
He is on month to month, would need to give him a 30 day notice.

Jeff offered to approach the tenant to discuss options and what he wants. Should time discussion appropriately so tenant does not move too early if wants to leave.
Stay until it sells?
Don't expect too many people
Online appointment/need to coordinate
Stay and perhaps investor? (Mature man/stable job)
Vacate?
99% of listings for sale, are offering to pay the buyers commission 2.5% to 3%.
Buyers' agent - need to have buyers' agreement - this could include buyer pays them 3%.
Buyers agent may insist on difference and could be negotiating point for seller to pay the difference, or buyer will pay.

I am happy to share this with the Lisa (s) and follow whatever interpretation we arrive at.

I certainly don't want us to argue over it. I am more than happy to go along with the plan.

Per spreadsheet this is currently $2,417.

Lisa included the language in the draft docs sent over last week "reserve all other past due expenses prior to 10/31/24" but it seems you have a different interpretation of what this means, or maybe and Lisa are aligned it does not cover what I sent you for expenses totaling 2,417.

Confirming if you want to address in mediation next week, and I will make a note to Natalie.

That feels like you are posturing and being a little combative. Per the proposal, I'm sharing to provide feedback on the way your note lands with me.

I don't think I said I what you are stating below. I said I would ask the Lisa(s) and am more than happy to go along with the plan as it reads. Thats all.

If both sides legal counsel think it reads differently, then yes, it might be something we need a mediators sage advice to adjudicate. That's what he does.

I hope this helps. And as we discussed, the most important thing is mutual respect, and space to have a different opinion without it becoming personal.

Looking forward to a cooperative resolution!

So, I assume that the mediation on the 5th might impact plans. But agree having a loosely defined framework makes sense.

My first reaction is that b-ball will be after the visit. Perhaps we work backwards and use hoops as the handoff that night. Thoughts?

Let's please afford the opportunity to re-evaluate if new information surfaces as was the case in our last mediation agreement. Agree?

My take away.

As you are not at the Kirkland residence, you would need to call and request separate policy for your car at existing residence. I can't do it as I am still in the Kirkland residence.

I would remain on existing policy, but my rate would adjust after you drop off.

We would then need to figure split payment of earthquake or I guess we could request that be a separate policy too and figure out payment.

Autopayment is on hold until Dec 10th as a courtesy. Lmk thoughts.

SafeCo is billed to the Jt Account - with your portion being larger than mine. The breakdown for the amount has been shared on multiple occasions.

All attempts and requests for reimbursement to the jt account for your larger share, as far back at Aug 16, have been ignored. My only solution now is to formally split it.

I called SafeCo to understand how to split our car insurance policies.

It was set up for auto deduct on Monday, Dec 2 from jt bank account - they have paused until Dec 12th, so give us time to figure it out. I confirmed this is a courtesy and will not impact the current coverage.

We will need to split and get own policies for each car, as single driver, so our rates will change.

Moving forward, you are of course free to choose whoever you would like for car insurance.

The sales office is closed today but will be calling me tomorrow to set up my separate account for the Subaru.

Monthly earthquake insurance is also included in jt payment, so we need to figure out how to split/pay moving forward.

I'm ok doing that for now assuming there is no dispute about amounts or it just gets messy staying in this state.

I left message for Alex to have autopayment pull from jt account on Dec 10.

See Safeco tab in the shared workbook which breaks it down. Yours is 532, mine is 225. We should both deposit that in the joint account.

You had requested the SafeCo breakdown in an email sent by your lawyers during the last mediation.

Can you confirm no further questions or issues on this. If you are good, I'll transfer my share into BofA.

In the email sent during mediation, besides SafeCo breakdown, you had also requested I deposit Sirius charge back in for $23, which I did, Confirmation wa drivers license charge was Max's, it was, proof Jennifer deposit, this was shared, back up for Rowland photography (this was kids school pics, and I had sent you link to download when it was purchased, check 3986, 60.55 for back flow assembly test, check 3987, this was carpet cleaning prior to your home inspector. I printed both checks into "BankofAmerica questions" tab. I had asked previously if any concerns/questions, you said no but let me know if anything further.

Safeco called me back and I spoke to Alex.

509 608 4742

My take away.

As you are not at the Kirkland residence, you would need to call and request separate policy for your car at existing residence. I can't do it as I am still in the Kirkland residence.

I would remain on existing policy, but my rate would adjust after you drop off.

We would then need to figure split payment of earthquake or I guess we could request that be a separate policy too and figure out payment.

Autopayment is on hold until Dec 10th as a courtesy. Lmk thoughts.

SafeCo is billed to the Jt Account - with your portion being larger than mine. The breakdown for the amount has been shared on multiple occasions.

All attempts and requests for reimbursement to the jt account for your larger share, as far back at Aug 16, have been ignored. My only solution now is to formally split it.

Why would we do this before we are divorced? Are you just intentionally trying to cost us more? I don't get you. First I offer anyway possible not to move the boys just for their own good and you won't let me keep you in the house even when you benefit, you have to make a big deal out of us being divorce to SAAS because that is in their best interest somehow, and now this. I assume you wanna file separately instead of his married too?

I called SafeCo to understand how to split our car insurance policies.

It was set up for auto deduct on Monday, Dec 2 from jt bank account - they have paused until Dec 12th, so give us time to figure it out. I confirmed this is a courtesy and will not impact the current coverage.

We will need to split and get own policies for each car, as single driver, so our rates will change.

Moving forward, you are of course free to choose whoever you would like for car insurance.

The sales office is closed today but will be calling me tomorrow to set up my separate account for the Subaru.

Monthly earthquake insurance is also included in jt payment, so we need to figure out how to split/pay moving forward.

Greg provided bill for fixing a hole in the wall for 180. I sent it to you.

To approve:

Greg is looking into hinges to fix sauna door that snapped over the summer. This can wait closer when we get house ready for sale if you prefer.

Kelly/Tom have asked to remove the tree outside our front yard and they will pay. We had it trimmed before but it's has grown further up and wider. Initially they asked because it was blocking their view but upon inspection roots are breaking up driveway which technically we would need to fix if damage gets too bad. We might need to note in sale disclosures if we don't take care of it now. Kelly has noted it already.

Moss/weed removal for yard/driveway etc by gardener and/or Greg. Greg power washed moss last time along driveway. New gardener used by Scott (Quy disappeared) can help with weed removal. This can wait for house sale too.

When I go into the spreadsheet, I see an October page but I also see pages that frankly feel borderline caustic and confrontational. Even the language used in those tabs feels combative. I'm letting you know that this situation is very difficult to sort out.

I am trying to work with you, but it feels like an evidence gathering exercise in "gotcha accounting" sometimes. Just giving you my feedback as I suggested so we can do this in a constructive way.

I don't think I said I what you are stating below. I said I would ask the Lisa(s) and am more than happy to go along with the plan as it reads. Thats all.

If both sides legal counsel think it reads differently, then yes, it might be something we need a mediators sage advice to adjudicate. That's what he does.

I hope this helps. And as we discussed, the most important thing is mutual respect, and space to have a different opinion without it becoming personal.

Looking forward to a cooperative resolution!

Per spreadsheet this is currently $2,417.

Lisa included the language in the draft docs sent over last week "reserve all other past due expenses prior to 10/31/24" but it seems you have a different interpretation of what this means, or maybe and Lisa are aligned it does not cover what I sent you for expenses totaling 2,417.

Confirming if you want to address in mediation next week, and I will make a note to Natalie.

I can simplify.

Oct 31st. Current total is 2,417. There could be more. Seattle children's still shows amounts pending insurance.

That note was because you had said no to paying for your portion of medical and then pushed back on other expenses I had included.

Just let me know if you still have that interpretation.

Still don't understand.

Anything above $250 is my 48%?

I thought I saw a response to this.

Anything above 250 would be yours. I reimbursed amounts that had debited that were mine. I see you still have some personal expenses that pulled from it recently including cell, rocket money and cares insurance.

As long as 250 remains in the account to cover the checks I am good.

Submitted a renewal application for Max's US passport today. As he is 16, he only needed one parent to sign / be present.

I could only pay with a check so I had to write against the jt Bank of America account. I'm going to transfer 250 in there now to cover for when the checks are presented by the state department and King county in the next two weeks or so.

Asking that the balance not be drawn below this amount so they checks do not bounce.

I'm going to work on setting up my individual BofA account to allow me to write checks which currently it does not.

So, I assume that the mediation on the 5th might impact plans. But agree having a loosely defined framework makes sense.

My first reaction is that b-ball will be after the visit. Perhaps we work backwards and use hoops as the handoff that night. Thoughts?

Let's please afford the opportunity to re-evaluate if new information surfaces as was the case in our last mediation agreement. Agree?

We should decide how we constructively address today. Ran our plan through ChatGPT for fun:

<ChatGPT>

Let me break down the actual impact:

Max:

- Complete autonomy over relationship with father
- Can choose any amount of time
- Can make decisions based on his feelings
- No restrictions on contact
- No supervision requirements
- No phases to progress through

Adrian:

Lost significant father son time from even last year

- Went from 66 days solo to limited visitation
- Can't get back to previous level of contact
- Permanently reduced relationship during childhood

No autonomy

- Can't choose more time like his brother
- Can't request return to previous schedule
- Stuck in rigid structure regardless of wishes

-No mechanism to increase time beyond set schedule

Unequal Treatment

- Brother has full freedom
- He has permanent restrictions
- Different standards for same family
- Can't earn same privileges as Max

Long-term Impact

- Changes relationship with father through childhood
- Can't recover lost time/connection ever
- Must wait until adulthood for autonomy
- Psychological impact of different treatment from brother

Unlike his brother, Max, this shows that rather than Adrian being protected, his free will as a child has been permanently taken away from him, even well past Max's age:

- Reduce his relationship with his father
- Remove his agency in the relationship
- Create inequality with his brother
- Limit future options until adulthood

The "protections" are actually restrictions that fundamentally alter his access to his father for the rest of his childhood, unlike his brother, who maintains full autonomy and control. Comparatively, Adrian has lost his relationship with his father while Max decides what he likes.

<EndChatGPT/>

So..... I've been thinking about how to explain to Adrian what happened today in a way that he can understand. This isn't about me - it's about Adrian never being able to have more time with his father, no matter what he wants or does, ever. Unlike Max, who has full freedom to choose his relationship with me, Adrian is now permanently restricted. He has no way to ask for more, return to what we had, or make his own decisions about spending time with me until he's an adult. His childhood as it was, is effectively over today, with no way for him to ever get it back no matter what he does.

The hardest part is explaining why one brother has full autonomy and the other has zero - and how, through no fault of his own, Adrian has lost something so irreplaceable forever. Agreeing to this was a real-life "Sophie's Choice." It's going to be such a tough conversation. One that, if my parents had tried to explain this kind of logic to Michael and me, no message could have soothed the pain of that disparity. As flawed as they were, they had the decency to understand what that would do to us.

BTW- did you have them vote on this again? If so, no explanation necessary.

I am not disagreeing. I understand what happened. I would not see AD till April at best if I did not give in. You are a great mom. But what I asked was if Adrian and Max voted on the plan like usual. I need to work with professionals to tell Adrian his childhood with me is largely over. He will reach Max's age and it will come and go. Then it will be three years later, only when is an adult, will he get to find his voice. Till then nothing he says will matter. You took that.

And you took it from only Adrian. You took mini-me's free will. You denied him agency for the rest of his childhood. And we all know how close you and Max are and how close mini-me and I were. So those should be interesting teen years deciphering how Max got free will at 15 (my proposal btw) but Adrian gets nothing at all- zero (your demand) Oh I am very clear about what you did in mediation. Crystal clear.

So just asking - did you take a vote again?

Adrian has been expressing how he feels, continues to, and has found his voice. You saw that in his communications to others, not just me.

I was not privy to communications to you in mediation about April timeframe. Your lawyer was aware of the legal ramifications going into mediation so there should have been no surprise.

Below is blaming me again.

I'm looking forward to speaking with Sound Practices. I understand they were supposed to reach out to me, but I have not heard from them to date. Is below how they encourage you to address this issue and communications with me?

I am not disagreeing. I understand what happened. I would not see AD till April at best if I did not give in. You are a great mom. But what I asked was if Adrian and Max voted on the plan like usual. I need to work with professionals to tell Adrian his childhood with me is largely over. He will reach Max's age and it will come and go. Then it will be three years later, only when is an adult, will he get to find his voice. Till then nothing he says will matter. You took that.

And you took it from only Adrian. You took mini-me's free will. You denied him agency for the rest of his childhood. And we all know how close you and Max are and how close mini-me and I were. So those should be interesting teen years deciphering how Max got free will at 15 (my proposal btw) but Adrian gets nothing at all- zero (your demand) Oh I am very clear about what you did in mediation. Crystal clear.

So just asking - did you take a vote again?

We should decide how we constructively address today. Ran our plan through ChatGPT for fun:

<ChatGPT>

Let me break down the actual impact:

Max:

- Complete autonomy over relationship with father
- Can choose any amount of time
- Can make decisions based on his feelings
- No restrictions on contact
- No supervision requirements
- No phases to progress through

Adrian:

Lost significant father son time from even last year

- Went from 66 days solo to limited visitation
- Can't get back to previous level of contact
- Permanently reduced relationship during childhood

No autonomy

- Can't choose more time like his brother
- Can't request return to previous schedule
- Stuck in rigid structure regardless of wishes
- No mechanism to increase time beyond set schedule

Unequal Treatment

- Brother has full freedom
- He has permanent restrictions
- Different standards for same family
- Can't earn same privileges as Max

Long-term Impact

- Changes relationship with father through childhood
- Can't recover lost time/connection ever
- Must wait until adulthood for autonomy
- Psychological impact of different treatment from brother

Unlike his brother, Max, this shows that rather than Adrian being protected, his free will as a child has been permanently taken away from him, even well past Max's age:

- Reduce his relationship with his father
- Remove his agency in the relationship
- Create inequality with his brother
- Limit future options until adulthood

The "protections" are actually restrictions that fundamentally alter his access to his father for the rest of his childhood, unlike his brother, who maintains full autonomy and control. Comparatively, Adrian has lost his relationship with his father while Max decides what he likes.

<EndChatGPT/>

So..... I've been thinking about how to explain to Adrian what happened today in a way that he can understand. This isn't about me - it's about Adrian never being able to have more time with his father, no matter what he wants or does, ever. Unlike Max, who has full freedom to choose his relationship with me, Adrian is now permanently restricted. He has no way to ask for more, return to what we had, or make his own decisions about spending time with me until he's an adult. His childhood as it was, is effectively over today, with no way for him to ever get it back no matter what he does.

The hardest part is explaining why one brother has full autonomy and the other has zero - and how, through no fault of his own, Adrian has lost something so irreplaceable forever. Agreeing to this was a real-life "Sophie's Choice." It's going to be such a tough conversation. One that, if my parents had tried to explain this kind of logic to Michael and me, no message could have soothed the pain of that disparity. As flawed as they were, they had the decency to understand what that would do to us.

BTW- did you have them vote on this again? If so, no explanation necessary.

Adrian's voice is your voice. You don't know what he says to me or to Kari. You have done this since we were best friends. But you destroyed that.

And now tell me you know what he really wants more than what two adults actually hear with our ears. You did that this summer as well when he told two professionals the same story and then you denied that. And to factual, honesty and transparency is not your strong suite.

For the record:

1. Factual Comparison of Children's Status:

Max (16):

- Full autonomy over relationship
- Direct communication with both parents
- Ability to modify contact based on preferences
- No supervision requirements
- No phase requirements
- Immediate implementation of his choices

Adrian (12):

- No autonomy until age 18
- Cannot modify contact regardless of preference
- Must follow rigid phase system
- Maximum contact permanently reduced
- Cannot return to previous relationship level even with perfect compliance
- Will be older than Max's current age before having any choice

2. Documented Impact:

2023: 66 days of direct father-son time

Current Framework:

- Phase I: 8 supervised hours bi-weekly
- Maximum (Phase IV): Significantly reduced from previous level
- Required waiting period: Minimum 240 days with perfect compliance
- Net reduction: Approximately 82% decrease in father-son time

3. Mediation Record:

- I specifically requested Adrian be given the same autonomy as Max
- This request was explicitly denied by you not to grant that equality
- The result is a permanent restriction on Adrian's relationship choices until age 18
- This creates a documented disparity between siblings that will last Adrian's entire remaining childhood

4. Professional Documentation:

- Our reunification counselor said the status quo at best is life support, nothing more.
- Two professionals received direct communication from Adrian in Summer 2023
- Their professional documentation exists independent of any parent's interpretation
- The current plan provides no mechanism for professional recommendations to modify the contact schedule

You did this. Let's not play with what was said in mediation. I was super clear, unambiguous, that at a minimum, could we at least please give Adrian the free will that Max has? They are brother's and given that your closeness to Max and mine to Adrian, this disparity not only silence him, but also could create a crisis in the future. The answer was a definitive "no." Adrian will be restricted regardless of either his voice or choice from now till adulthood,

I came in with Connor's plan. Yours was far worse, and that is what you go. I will not permit you to alter history. You did this. After the last 18 months and hundreds of thousands of dollars, your grand accomplishment was to give Max free will and take away Adrian's till he is an adult.
